I want you to know that I am against any regulations controlling XM radio.  I am a user of XM radio and I find it very useful.  When travelling it is difficult to know what stations provide what information.  For example, when travelling in Chicago I have used the XM Chicago Traffic and Weather station to check the weather prior to arriving and I use the traffic when I arrive.  I'm not familiar with the local stations and they don't continuosly broadcast traffic information.
I don't see it being American to trump competativeness in business by throwing up regulations.  In a free trade society improving your product and becoming more efficient is what will keep you in business and improve the materials or services being provided to us.
